He then rend the address, which was as follows:-HONGKONE VOLUNTEERS.

To ALVEED WOOLLEY, ESQ., Lieutenant, Hongkong Volunteers. Sir,-We the undersigned have learnt, with regret that, owing to indisposition, a change of air is neces-sary, and that it is your intention to leave the Colony for a trip to England, and we take this opportunity of wishing you a pleasant voyage and a happy reunion with your friends when you get there. We would not forget the valuable help you have been to our Corps, especially during the past season, when your every effort has been directed to the infusing of new life into the numbers and promoting competitions. Too much cannot be said, and we are unable to sufficiently thank you for the great interest you have taken in the formation of the Recreation Committee, in procuring funds, being present at the concerts, and helping generally to make everything more attractive than it had been before; the success of which has been indelibly imprinted on the minds of almost every Volunteer. We look forward to your return to Hongkong, when we trust we shall all prove ourselves more worthy of the gallant officers we are now commanded by; also that your visit to the old country will be the thorough building up of your sys-tem, and you will be better able to undertake those operous duties that have fallen to your lot in life. THE REV. R. LECHLER.

Yesterday afternoon an address was presented to the Rev. R. Lechler, who is going away for a holiday, at his residence at the Basle Mission House. There were present the Rev. Dr. Chalmers, Rev. H. The address was presented by the Rev. Dr. Chalmers, who said—My dear friends and Mr. and Mirs. We are indebted to him for that and also for putting on record in the Missionary Journal some account of the leading facts in connection with the Basle Mission work in China, of which Mr. Lechler and Mr. Hamberg were the founders some forty years ago. There are few in China who can look back so far as that. I can recollect about thirty-four years ago making the acquaintance of Mr. Lochlor and Mr. Hamberg, and it is one of the pleasantest recollections of that early time. ENGLISH TRANSLATIONS. The following is a fair equivalent in English of the words the Chinese have inscribed on presents to the Prince of Wales. J. CHALMERS:

Hongkong, 12th April, 1886.

AN ODE TO THE PRINCE OF WALES, PRESIDENT OF THE INDIAN AND COLONIAL BEHIRITION Great England's Prince, the Empire's heir, And better far the heir of Her Who weers a Crown more rich and rare Than wealth of Indies can confer-Long live the Queen! Long may see wear That Crown of goodness pure and bright, Which then too wear'st by double right—True son of Him who thought and plan'd To hold in Exhibition grand A world-wide fair in former days, We sing thy praise; And praising thee, We praise the grace and majesty Of England's rule which widely spreads And blessings sheds O'er land and sea.

The months of men, than monument Or obelisk, more permanent Shall make the fame Of England's name, And laud her virtuous government-In peace or war, with sage design, To hold or lead, to do or dare, Or far or near, or here or there. Is clearly thine. Behold Hongkong, a little isle. Nought but a barron rock erewhile, Where precious products ne'er had been. But shunned its orags and shelvy cos, None thinking then of what would be.

Transformed by British rule and skill
And model laws, Hongkong is made
A port for ships, a mart for trade,
Which nations all combine to fill.
Officials fit hold each his piace. Both high and low to duty true; And near and far All trustful are, Bestowing still laudation due On virtue and far-reaching grace-

Our working men and merchants all, Both rude and learned, great and small, In humble praise would prostrate fall. To hear is much. What then to see A true-born King | Our hearts revering turn to thee, And thus we sing :--

Who is this King of mer?
Great England's Prince.
Goodness is his delight;
Hear all the world units. And, mid the glorious sight, Bless England's Prince Reviving Nature shows on every spray First touches of the light of early spring.

Sweet showers and gentle winds of plenty tell; The tentive age of gold has come again. Tie fit that men should benedictions sing While fairies rainbow-clad in concert join.

The Hiogo News of the 2nd inst. gives the following account of the above accident:—From a latter written by one of the passengers on board the P. and O. Company's steamer Veneti, and other sources of information, we learn that the vessel ran ashare at about a quarter to eleven g'clock on the night of the 27th ultimo, upon a natch of soft broken rock justinaide the dangerous Isaki reef that lies off the southern extremity of Tanabe Bay. The night at the time of the accident was very dark, with a strong wind and have had intercourse with him in many ways, and heavy sea running, but by extreme good fortune the steamer's position was such that the Isaki don't think that we have ever had an unpleasant reef, part of which is eleven feet above water, acted as a protection, and the Venetic remained as steady as if in dock. When the vessel ran ashers most of the passengers were asleep, and although ties we all know so well they possess in common. the shock must have been pretty severe, as the vessel was going thirteen knots, several of them in this address only, but in many hearts, which did not feel it. However, everyone was warned will always cherish a remembrance of what they to be ready in case of emergency, the boats were have experienced. I think I may quote two lines got out, and the passengers—as one of them says -"epont the night in smoking, telling yarns, and cheering up the ladies, who behaved quietly and pluckily." While the passengers were thus employed the officers and crew were engaged energetically in making preparations to save their vessel. Cargo was at once jettisoned, and this continued until the Venetia was actually nearly affoat. Morning came, and all were to leave the missionary field for a season, and return relieved to find their position so much better ing the accident was despatched to Wakayama, Jackson and yourself, and upon the whole of Wo des re to express our gratitude to God for pro- the nearest station, for transmission to the Comconour that we should be thought worthy, on and advancement be consent in the Protectant so tea-houses at their disposal. The stranger was a good way off land, but in a while changed her course and came within signaling distance. This was the Moray, and as Captain Duncau signified his readiness to take on the Venetic's passengers to Yokohama. preparations were made to transfer them on board. There was still a nasty sea running, but all got safely into the Morey by means of Japanese boats, their luggage, however, remain-

Being thus relieved of the auxiety attaching to the care of the passengers, the efforts of those in the stranded steamer were concentrated upon measures to get her off. Several attempts were made to heave the steamer astern with an anchor laid out at some distance, but all to no purpose, and the sugar, of which the cargo principally consisted, was still going over the side. About seven o'clock p.m. the Omi-maru arrived from Kobe, and anchored as close in as appeared judicious in order to be ready to give assistance as early as possible next morning. From midnight on Sunday nufil two o'clock next morning another abortive attempt was made by those on board the Venetia, and ultimately it was decided that the help of the Omi should be secured. Two steel hawsers were passed, and parted in succession, but a third proved more enduring and at one o'clock the Venetia alid off into deep water. If either steamer had been less powerful, it is more than probable that extra assistance would have been required, but the Venetia's engines are of 550 horse-power and those of the Omi 359. Together, and worked as they were on the occasion, they exerted a tremendous power. We are informed that owing to the patch of rock upon which the Venetia struck being a kind of soft broken granite, the injuries to the vessel are very much less serious than might be supposed. The angle irons and frames of the port floor from the after part of the engine-room to about half the length of the main hold, are here and there started or strained, but none of the plates broken. In the engine-room, one plate is cracked under a column; this, however, was speedily secured, and no water came through.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE PROTECTORATE OF ANNAM AND TONQUIN.

The decree of the President of the French Republic on the organisation of the Annam and Tonquin protectorate has been published. It found faithful labourers by the Heavenly Master, REPORT ADDRESSED BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE

REPUBLICON THE ORGANISATION OF THE PROTECTORATE OF ANNAM AND TONQUIN. The pacification of Annam and Tonquin is now sufficiently advanced to warrant the placing of the country under the civil authority and the Welley. The presentation is entirely an affair wish you much success in your work under the basis. The accompanying decree is intended to secure both these ends. It is inspired by these ideas of simplicity and economy which have been recommended by Parliament, and without which the country will not view with favour the extension of our colonial domain.

The principle of the future organisation may be stated in a few words.

The Protectorate of Annam and Tonguin is to be a distinct and independent service, having its own laws and its own budget, and will have no other relation with the Metropolitan Government than such as may result from the appointment by the latter of the Resident-General and a few high functionaries and the granting of the subvention which will be necessary for some years to come to balance the receipts and expenditure. The administration, therefore, will be entirely located in Annam and Tonquin, and the control only will be reserved to the Metropolis. The responsibility of the Resident-General will be considerable, and on his ability will depend in great measure the success of this laborious enterprise.

The administrative system provided for the Protectorate is of the least complicated character. It conforms, moreover, to the treaties which have been concluded with the Court of

It is intended to utilise the organisation, relatively perfect, which exists in the Annamite kingdom, and to employ it in the sense of our ideas and the progress which we wish to see realised in these countries. The Resident-General, therefore, should use all his efforts to impart a decisive impulsion at the head quarters of the Government, at Hué, and then ascertain, by the aid of his various agents on the spot, the effect of this impulsion in the provinces. It does not appear doubtful that by this means the administrative machinery of the Protectorate may be reduced to small proportions and will require only a small number of European functionaries.

I would add that, according to my views, the only service on which the Resident-General ought at first to exercise a direct action-because as yet they exist only in a radimentary stateare the customs and public works. These are the necessary instruments of our commercial derelopment, and we cannot wait for their being elaborated from Annamite initiative. These services require a unity of direction and a harmony of views which can only come from the Metropolis.

Hereafter, in proportion as our authority becomesestablished and the influence of our civilisation penetrates more completely the country placed under our tutalage, we will have to extend our action to a certain number of branches. such as the administration of justice, education, taxation, etc.; but progress in these directions ought to be effected gradually without disturbing or clashing with the manners of the populations

He says: - "Three months since two lion any cooked food, especially vegetables of all kinds, and actually takes tea with relish. It has become quite attached to the keeper's wife, and follows her like a dog."

A singular story comes from the province of Limburg, on the Dutch frontier. The owner of a large manufactory, who had married young, and was left a widower, had an only daughter, to whom all the most desirable young men in the neighbourhood were paying attention. Her father noticed that she treated them all with indifference, and showed a marked preference for a young clerk of his, an orphan, with no means Captain Manlicher, Chief Engineer of the but his salary. As he had always given the greatest satisfaction in the performance of his duties, and was exceedingly well conducted, the father, persuaded that he would never venture to sincerely attached to him, made up his mind to story is that, instead of marrying the daughter, she is now the wife of the father.
